

REPORT MADE AT THE KGB PARTY CAUCUS MEETING

BY THE MEMBER OF THE CPSU CENTRAL COMMITTEE'S POLITBUREAU,
CHAIRMAN OF THE COMMITTEE FOR STATE SECURITY OF THE USSR (KGB),

COMRAD Yu.V.ANDROPOV

March 25, 1981

Comrades,

It has been three weeks since the conclusion of the 26th Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union.

The Supreme Forum of the CPSU worked for eight days discussing not only the most pressing issues in the life of the Party and the country, but also issues that are acknowledged as important and pressing worldwide, even in the country of most ardent adversaries of socialism.

26th Congress of the party once again demonstrated the triumph of Marxist-Leninist ideas in the specific actions of the soviet people. In these ideas, the party finds accurate answers to all questions posed by life, and uses them as a basis for determining reliable paths for achieving the target objectives.

The CPSU Central Committee's Report to the 26th Congress of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union represents an example of the creative evolution of Marxism-Leninism. This document contains an amalgam of theory and practice, revolutionary impulse and sound judgment, adherence to high standards and optimism.

Using V.I.Lenin's words, the party brought to its congress "thought through and carefully, by joint labor and joint efforts of all members of the party, processed practical experience of economic development."^[1] The Report, as well as other documents of the Congress, weigh in on the question of building socialism and maintaining its foundations.